LENTEN PERFORMANCES IN THE JACOBEOAN AND CAROLINE THEATRES

THE observation of Lent in the London theatres during the Jacobean and Caroline period was less strict than in Elizabethan times, but it is not easy to make out precisely what the practice was.

Even under Queen Elizabeth the restrictions seem to have varied from time to time. An order of the Privy Council on 13 March 1578/9 had forbidden all playing in Lent (Acts of the Privy Council, xi. 73-74), and Sir Edmund Chambers notes that Henslowe's records of performances of the Admiral's men show long intervals for Lent in 1595 and 1596. But in 1597 the company played a good part of the season before Easter (Chambers, E.S. ii. 141-2), and in 1592 Lord Strange's men scarcely observed Lent at all. (Ibid. i. 315-16.) In the years 1600, 1601, and 1604 Council orders seem to reflect a strict enforcement of Lenten closing. (Ibid.) But again there were wholesale violations of the prohibition in 1615, for on 29 March of that year representatives of all four of the leading London companies were called before the Privy Council for presuming to play despite the order of the Master of the Revels during 'this prohibited time of Lent'. (M.S.C. i. 372.)

After 1615 I find no example of a strictly enforced prohibition of playing during Lent.¹ Indeed, in January 1618/19 certain of the inhabitants of the district of Blackfriars, in a petition of complaint against the private theatre in their precinct, recited the nuisances caused by the theatre, and concluded: 'Theise inconveniencēs fallinge out almost everie daie in the winter tyme (not forbearinge the tyme of Lent) from one or twoe of the clock till sixe att night. . . .' (M.S.C. i. 92.) Perhaps the fact that the first signature to this petition is that of William Gouge, the Puritan minister of St. Anne's, Blackfriars, should prompt one to expect exaggeration in the statements about the frequency of the inconveniences caused by the theatre. On the other hand, a number of other statements of comparable date indicate that the theatres were usually under some kind of Lenten restriction. Later allusions to the Lenten dejection of the players are not unlike the statement by Stephens in 1615, in his character of 'A common Player': '... when aduersities come, they come together: For Lent and Shrouetuesday be not farre asunder, then he is deieted daily and weekly'. (Essayes and Characters, V₇^v-V₈.) For example, one of the poems on the death of the great actor, Richard Burbage, 13 March 1618/19 (i.e. during Lent) has the lines:

And you, his sad companions, to whom Lent
Becomes more lenten yn this accident,
Henceforth your wavering flag no more hang out.
Play now noe more at all . . .

(C. C. Stopes, Burbage and Shakespeare's Stage [1913], p. 119.)

Ten years later writers are still assuming that their readers will be familiar with the Lenten troubles of the players, for John Earle writes in one of his characters, "'24. A Player", . . . Shrouetuesday hee feares as much as the Baudes, and Lent is more damage to him then the Butcher.' (Micro-cosmographie [1628], E₇^v-E₈.) In the following year Francis Lenton noted the same deprivation as it applied to the spectators in his observations on the frivolities of the young Inns of Court man:

Your Theaters hee daily doth frequent
(Except the intermitted time of Lent)

(The Young Gallants Whirlgigg [1629], B₄.)

William Prynne, in his Histriomastix, published in 1633 but written, at least in part, several years earlier, spoke of a recent change: 'Thirdly, there are none so much addicted to Stage-playes, but when they goe unto places where they cannot have them, or when as they are suppressed by publike authority, (as in times of pestilence, and in Lent till now of late) can well subsist without them. . . .' (Gggg₄^v.)

All these allusions to the unhappiness of the players and the deprivation of the spectators during Lent show clearly that in the time of James I and Charles I the London theatres were not open for business as usual during the weeks before Easter, in spite of the fact that there are no records of absolute prohibition like those of 1579 and 1601. Prynne, however, indicates that there had recently been a change, and he seems to imply some liberalization of the regulations. A century and a half later Edmond Malone, in his enlarged history of the stage, indicated the probable form which the relaxation of the prohibition took:

Plays in the time of King James the First, (and probably afterwards,) appear to have been performed every day at each theatre during the winter season, except in the time of Lent, when they were not permitted on the sermon days, as they were called, that is, on Wednesday and Friday; nor on the other days of the week, except by special license: which however was obtained by a fee paid to the Master of the Revels.

These dispensations [i.e. for playing in Lent] did not extend to the sermon-days, as they were then called; that is, Wednesday and Friday in each week.

After Sir Henry Herbert became possessed of the office of Master of the Revels, fees for permission to perform in Lent appear to have been constantly paid by each of the theatres. (Variorum, iii. 151-3, 65 n. 7, 66.)

Malone did not, unfortunately, document his assertions; but scattered quotations from Sir Henry Herbert's manuscripts extracted by others, or used by Malone in other contexts, are helpful. Several passages record dispensations to the players and managers for Lent. For example:

[Received] of the King's players for a lenten dispensation, the other companys promising to doe as much, 44s. March 23 1616'

Of John Hemmings, in the name of the four companys, for toleration in the holy-dayes, 44s. January 29, 1618. Extracts from the office-book of Sir George Buc. MSS. Herbert. (Variorum, iii. 65 n. 7.)

For the Kings company.

M^r Hemings brought mee for Lent this 1 Apr. 1624-2¹!

For a daye in Lent from the Cockpitt companye when their tyme was out 10^s M^r Biston sent mee for Lent by M^r Blagrove in the name of the company this 5 April 2¹!

From Mr. Blagrove, in the name of the Cockpit company, for this Lent, this 30th March, 1624. £2.0.0.

March 20, 1626. From Mr. Hemmingses, for this Lent allowanse, £2.0.0. MSS. Herbert. (Variorum, iii. 66 n.)

After the Restoration, when Sir Henry was endeavouring to maintain himself in his old office with all the old rights and fees, he asserted in a petition to the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chamberlain that among his regular fees was 'For Lent Fee . . . [£3.0.0.]'. (Variorum, iii. 266.) The inflation is characteristic of Herbert's Restoration petitions, but in other instances scattered records usually show that he did exercise before the wars the rights he claimed after the Restoration.

One final example bears on the problem of the allowance of acting during Lent in the Caroline period. We know from Malone's extracts from Herbert's Office Book that in the midst of the long plague-closing from May 1636 to October 1637 (see above, ii. 661-5) the theatres were opened for a week near the end of February 1636/7. But the relation of Lent to this short playing period is indicated only by the Earl of Strafford's London correspondent, George Garrard, who wrote the Earl as follows:

Upon a little Abatement of the Plague, even in the first Week of Lent, the Players set up their Bills, and began to play in the Black-Fryars and other Houses. But my Lord of Canterbury quickly reduced them to a better Order; for, at the next Meeting at Council his Grace complained of it to the King, declared the Solemnity of Lent, the Unfitness of that Liberty to be given, both in respect of the Time and the Sickness, . . . concluding that if his Majesty did not command him to the contrary, he would lay them by the Heels, if they played again . . . [The Lord Chamberlain thereupon objected to the Archbishop's interference] . . . So the King put an End to the Business by commanding my Lord Chamberlain that they should play no more. (Strafforde's Letters, ii. 56.)

These surviving records seem to me generally to confirm Malone's understanding that so long as the managers paid the proper fee to the Master of the Revels the theatres could remain open during Lent for four days each week except Holy Week.

There is further confirmation in Herbert's Office Book (though Malone did not note it in this connexion) in some of the records of the French troupe which visited London in 1635 during and after Lent (11 February to 29 March). The French players are first noted on 15 and 17 February 1634/5, when they performed before the Queen at Denmark House and then before both the King and Queen at the Cockpit in Whitehall. But of course these performances at court would not have been governed by the Lenten restrictions applicable to the London theatres. Sir Henry Herbert records:

This day being Friday, and the 20 of the same monthe [February], the kinge tould mee his pleasure, and commanded mee to give order that this Frenche company should playe the too sermon daies in the weeke, during their time of playinge in Lent, and in the house of Drury-lane, where the queenes players usually playe.

The kings pleasure I signified to Mr. Beeston [manager of the Phoenix in Drury Lane], the same day who obeyd readily.

The house-keepers are to give them by promise the benefit of their interest for the two days of the first weeke.

They had the benefitt of playinge on the sermon daies, and gott two hundred pounds at least; besides many rich clothes were given them.

They had freely to themselves the whole weeke before the weeke before Easter, which I obtaynd of the king for them. (Variorum, iii. 121.)

These records of the French visitors of 1635 fit precisely the interpretation already made that the acting dispensations which the London companies bought gave them four days a week for playing, but not the two sermon days in any week of Lent and not Holy Week. Since these were the days given to the French players for their performances, it is not surprising that Christopher Beeston 'obeyd readily', for the days he was graciously granting were days on which Queen Henrietta's company could not have performed at the Phoenix in any case.

So far Malone's understanding of Lenten regulations in the Jacobean and Caroline period seems confirmed. On the other hand, his understanding that it was for plays that the theatres were open during Lent is not so well sustained by the surviving records. Malone himself noted exceptions to dramatic fare in the Office Book:

The managers however did not always perform plays during that season. Some of the theatres, particularly the Red Bull and the Fortune, were then let to prize-fighters, tumblers, and rope-dancers, who sometimes added a Masque to the other exhibitions. These facts are ascertained by the following entries:

1622. 21 Martii. For a prise at the Red-Bull, for the howse; the fencers would give nothing. 10s. MSS. Astley.

From Mr. Gunnel, [Manager of the Fortune,] in the name of the dancers of the ropes for Lent, this 15 March, 1624. £1.0.0. (Variorum, iii. 66 n.)

There were other Herbert records of a like nature and dated during Lent, which Malone found no occasion to copy, but which are known from the extracts of others who saw the manuscript of the Office Book. For example:

For the Kings company.

Shankes Ordinary written by Shankes himself this 16 March 1623. (Halliwell-Phillipps Scrap-Books, Kemp, p. 127.)

Reced of Mr Lowins for allowinge of a Dutch vaulter att their house 18 feeb: 1630.¹

From Vincent—For dancing on the Ropes this Lent at ye Fortune by Blagrave 7 March 1634—2¹¹ (Halliwell-Phillipps, Fortune, p. 46.)

It is clear from these records that the activities which took place in the specially licensed London theatres on their allowed days in Lent were not always performances of plays. Were they ever plays? Was Malone mistaken in his reading of the accounts in Sir Henry Herbert's Office Book? W. J. Lawrence contended that he was. In an essay entitled 'The Origin of the Substantive Theatre Masque' he declared that playing had long been rigorously prohibited during the period of abstinence, but . . . a loophole of escape from an intolerable position had been found. Finding that exhibitions of fencing and acrobatics gave little offence in the close time, the Master of the Revels availed of the circumstance to extract an extra fee and make things a trifle less stringent for the players. Though the proceeds of Lenten letting were the prerogative of the theatre owners, they doubtless shared them, by arrangement, with the players. . . . The secret is out. After acting in Lent had been regularly prohibited for some years in James's time, the players got out of their difficulty by letting their theatres during Lent to foreign mountebanks. (Pre-Restoration Stage Studies [1927], pp. 329-30.)

Lawrence thought that a further step in the development of non-dramatic entertainment at the theatres during Lent was the evolution of what he called the 'substantive theatre masque', of which The World Tossed at Tennis, The Sun's Darling, and Microcosmus are examples. His argument is the familiar combination of winning exuberance, non sequiturs, careless mis-statements of fact, irrelevancies, sweeping generalizations from slight evidence, and triumphant conclusion. Nevertheless, the account includes, as usual with Lawrence, shrewd observations, and cannot be ignored. One may ask, therefore, what evidence not cited by Lawrence exists to show that the Jacobean and Caroline theatres, though allowed to remain open a good part of the time during Lent, did not present plays then?

The various previously noted laments about the poor players are inconclusive, for the acknowledged prohibition during Holy Week and on Wednesdays and Fridays in the preceding five and a half weeks would have involved nearly fifty per cent. reduction in playing time, and a lamentable shrinking of income, even if the companies had performed their usual plays on all the permitted days. The licences for new or newly revived plays which have come down from Herbert's records during his period of activity, 1622-42, suggest restricted activities, but they do not support the assumption of a complete absence of plays in Lent.

There are nearly 140 of Herbert's dated licensing records now known, and it is notable, to be sure, that fewer of them fall in Lent than in any other period of the year. It is perfectly clear that Lent was not a usual time for the production of new plays, as January, May, June, October, and November clearly were. (See above, i. 101-3.) Yet we know of records of performance licences for five pieces granted by the Master of the Revels during Lent: Dekker and Ford's The Sun's Darling, for the Lady Elizabeth's men at the Phoenix, 3 March 1623/4; John Shank's piece called Shank's Ordinary, for the King's men, 16 March 1623/4; Massinger's Emperor of the East, for the King's men at Blackfriars and the Globe, 11 March 1630/1; William Heminges's Coursing of a Hare, or The Madcap, for the company at the Fortune, some time in March 1632/3; and Henry Glapthorne's The Hollander, or Love's Trial, for Queen Henrietta's company at the Phoenix, on 12 March 1635/6. (See above, iii. 459-61; v. 1050-1; iv. 777-81; 542-3; 482-3.)

Of the five one might argue for Lawrence that The Sun's Darling is not a play but one of his 'substantive theatre masques', and therefore a proper Lenten theatre production. But though The Sun's Darling is allegorical, so is A Game at Chess, and that piece was produced with sensational success at the Globe six months later. (See above, iv. 870-9.) Shank's Ordinary is more to Lawrence's purpose, for the actor and jig-dancer John Shank is known as a writer only for his songs and jigs, and Shank's Ordinary may have been some special sort of Lenten entertainment. (See above, ii. 562-7 and v. 1049-51.) Even for Massinger's Emperor of the East Lawrence might present a weak case by contending that it was one of the author's plays written in the plague year of 1630, during which we have no Herbert licences, and was therefore part of an accumulation of unacted plays prepared by the prompter, in an idle period, for production later. (See above, iv. 755 and 777-81.)

Though the cases I have made to reconcile the Lenten acting licences of The Sun's Darling and The Emperor of the East with Lawrence's hypothesis that no plays were acted in the London theatres during Lent do not strike me as very impressive, I can make none at all for William Heminges's The Coursing of a Hare, or The Madcap, licensed for the Fortune some time in March 1632/3 [all but the first five days of March fell in Lent], or for Glapthorne's The Hollander, licensed ten days after the beginning of Lent in 1635/6. Lawrence's entertaining reconstruction of the Lenten practices of the players must therefore be rejected.

I think one must say, then, that an examination of the extant entries from Sir Henry Herbert's Office Book seems to indicate that in the Jacobean and Caroline period the theatres were theoretically closed during Lent, but that upon the payment of a fee to the Master of the Revels the prohibition was enforced only on Wednesdays and Fridays and during Holy Week; and that even on those days an exception was made at least once—in the case of the French players at the Phoenix in 1635. On the days when the theatres were open in Lent the entertainment often consisted of fencing, rope dancing, and vaulting, at least at the Fortune, the Red Bull, and the Globe. Though there were performances of plays, such performances were far fewer than at other times in the spring and autumn, and accordingly the earnings of the players were sufficiently reduced to make Lent an unpopular season with them.

An analysis of the Annals for the period (see below, vii. 16 ff.) roughly confirms this impression. Notable is the diary of Sir Humphrey Mildmay, the most consistent theatre-goer among private men of the time of whom we have record. Sir Humphrey records in the period of his diary and accounts (January 1631/2 to December 1641) some fifty-four visits to plays, exclusive of court performances. Only two of the visits fell in the period of Lent, though it must be noted that Sir Humphrey was often out of town at this season. The two entries are:

- | | |
|---------------------|---|
| 1633/4 20 March | 'To a base play att the Cocke pitt' 'this after noone J went to the Cocke pitt to a playe w th Bor An th : a fooleishe one' |
| 1634/5, 19 February | 'To a play, & to Supper' . . . |

(See above, ii. 676-7.)

Other Lenten activities found in the Annals mostly pertain to court activities or to licences, but play performances outside the court are indicated or suggested in March 1621/2, when John Gill was wounded by an actor on the stage of the Red Bull (see above, i. 166-7); on 16 February 1634/5, when Herbert committed Cromes to the Marshalsea for lending the Salisbury Court players the church robe they used in a production in their theatre, presumably within the previous three or four days (see above, i. 294); in February and March 1634/5, when John Greene saw six plays performed at the Blackfriars and the Phoenix (English Historical Review, xliii [1928], 386; no specific days are recorded, but all but ten days of these two months fell in Lent); and 24-28 February 1636/7, when the companies all acted for five days between plague-closings. (See above, ii. 662.)

These activities are not extensive, and some of them do not necessarily indicate Lenten performances, but together they seem to me to refute Lawrence's contention, and to corroborate the other evidence that in the Jacobean and Caroline period the London theatres did present a reduced number of plays, as well as variety turns, four days a week during the first five and a half weeks of Lent.

APPENDIX B

SUNDAY PERFORMANCES IN THE LONDON THEATRES

THERE has been a certain amount of discussion of Sunday performances of plays—perhaps because some of the Puritans speak rather violently on the subject and have sometimes been taken too literally. It may be convenient if I state first my conclusions, and then such relevant facts as I have found. I find no clear evidence of Sunday performances in the London theatres in this period. Sunday performances of masques and plays at court were common, but not so invariable as the Puritans asserted, and there appear to have been a few years of Sabbath observance even at court after the statute of 1 Car. I, c. 1.

In the first place one would assume that King James's proclamation of 7 May 1603 continued in force unless the evidence or allegations indicated the contrary. This proclamation was explicit:

And for that we are informed that there hath beene heretofore great neglect in this kingdome of keeping the Sabbath-day: For better observing of the same, and avoyding all impious prophanation, we do straightly charge and commaund, that no Beare-bayting, Bul-bayting, Enterludes, Common Playes, or other like disordered or unlawful Exercises, or Pastimes, be frequented, kept, or used at any time hereafter upon the Sabbath-day. (Chambers, E.S. iv. 335.)

Perhaps the most notable evidence that this proclamation was enforced and that the theatres were closed on Sundays under the first two Stuarts is the absence of statements to the contrary by the sabbatarian Puritans who had attacked Sunday performances in Elizabeth's time, and who, in the reign of Charles I, are articulate enough about Sabbath-breaking at court. Positive evidence indeed is supplied in 1615 by J[ohn] G[reen] in his Refutation of the Apology for Actors, when he challenges Heywood: 'If Plaies do so much good, why are they not suffered on the Sabbath, a day select wherein to doe good.' (H₃^v.) I do not find that even William Prynne asserts that the London theatres were open on Sundays.

In the Annals of Jacobean and Caroline theatrical affairs (see below) I have listed records of performances at the public and private theatres in London. Only two of these performances might be thought to fall on Sundays,¹ and I think they probably did not. For a period of five years, 1628–33, the King's men turned over to Sir Henry Herbert their profits on the second day of one revival in the winter and one in the summer. (See above, i. 23–24.) Two of the eleven records fall on Sundays (22 November 1629 and 12 June 1631), and they might be thought to constitute evidence of Sunday performances in the theatres of the King's men. It seems to me more likely, however, that Herbert recorded the day he received payment, not the day of the performance from which the payment was derived. In these particular accounts it is the money received which is important for him, not the play, since they were all old plays that had been licensed before, but the amounts of payment fluctuated. In the 1629 records he twice said 'being brought me by Blagrove', and in 1630, 1631, 1632, and 1633, he says 'Received of . . .' or 'R. of . . .' (Herbert, pp. 43–44.) Probably the performance itself was on the previous day, but we cannot be sure.

If these two records are allowed to indicate dates of payment and not dates of performance, then I have found no evidence that the London theatres were open on Sundays. Sir Edmund Chambers pointed out that 'It is probable that the proclamation against Sunday plays, issued by James I as one of the first acts of his reign, did no more, so far as London was concerned, than reaffirm an already accepted practice.'² (E.S. i. 315.) As evidence of the continuance of Sunday abstinence he notes that twelve years later, when the Baskervilles made their agreement with Queen Anne's players in June 1615, the actors agreed to pay 1s. 8d. per day 'for every of sixe daies in the weeke wherin they should play'. A six-day week was still taken as normal at the Red Bull theatre eight years later. In his Chancery Bill of 25 October 1623, concerned with shares in the Red Bull, Thomas Woodford says that among other profits due to his eighteenth share was 'Three pence profit a day amounting to Eighteene pence a weeke . . .'. (Hotson, pp. 327–8.) I have found no reason to think that there was any change in this six-day week in the London theatres¹ before the Civil War.

¹ W. J. Lawrence asserted, Englische Studien, xlviii (1914–15), 227 n. 3, that the French players acted at the Red Bull on Sunday in 1629. He has mistaken Herbert's date of receipt for a date of performance, however.

² W. J. Lawrence's evidence (loc. cit.) for Sunday performances in the London theatres seems to me negligible. In some instances he has taken the references to court performances as references to public or private theatre performances. His evidence for Sunday performances from Henslowe's records denies Greg's analysis of Henslowe's dates (Henslowe's Diary, ii. 324–6). Greg, as usual, seems to me more reliable than Lawrence.

SUNDAY PERFORMANCES AT COURT

At court, however, Sunday performances were common, though not so common as the Puritans said. In Britain's Remembrancer, 1628, George Wither complained of the court:

Gods holy Sabbaths, most among them, there,
Observe not much; except it be to weare
Their finest clothes . . .
On Sundayes far more Coaches rumble thither,
Then doe in some three other dayes together:
And, seldome have they leisure for a Play,
Or Maske, except upon Gods Holy-day.

(R₆^{r-v}.)

In 1640 Mr. Peirce, chaplain to the Earl of Salisbury and lecturer at Covent Garden, wrote in a paper preserved by Archbishop Laud: 'I wish the Parliament would reform two things: 1. The sitting of the Council on Sunday afternoon. 2. The having plays on Sunday night.' (C.S.P., Dom., 1640-1, p. 212.)

In his History of the Parliament of England Thomas May reviewed the conduct of King Charles and his ministers from 1628 to 1640, and commented loftily: 'The example of the Court, where Playes were usually presented on Sundaies, did not so much draw the Country to imitation, as reflect with disadvantage upon the Court it selfe . . .'. (1647 ed., E₄^v.) And more entertainingly a writer in a Parliamentary newsbook jibed: '. . . in time they [the Cavaliers] will go neere to put downe all preaching and praying, and have some religious Masque or play instead of Morning and Evening Prayer; it has been an old fashion at Court, amongst the Protestants there, to shut up the Sabbath with some wholesome Piece of Ben Jonson or Davenant, a kinde of Comicall Divinity'. (Mercurius Britanicus, 9-16 November 1643, as quoted in Hotson, p. 9.) The accusation that the masques and plays of Jonson and Davenant were thought fit to shut up the Sabbath at court is amusingly accurate, for extant records show that masques and plays by both dramatists had Sunday presentations before the court—Jonson's in 1616/17, 1621, 1621/2, 1622/3, 1624/5, 1630/1, and 1634; and Davenant's in 1636/7 and 1637/8.

On the other hand, the assertion that at court 'Playes were usually presented on Sundaies' and 'seldome have they leisure for a Play, / Or Maske, except upon Gods Holy-day' is the familiar Puritan distortion of the facts. We have records of some forty Sunday dramatic performances at court during our twenty-seven years, but there are about two hundred on weekdays. Perhaps the best approximation of court practice is to be derived from the three extant bills presented by the King's company for plays performed at court during the reign, in which each occasion is dated, giving us the complete record of court performances by the company in the period indicated. (See above, i. 27-28, 51-52, and Herbert, pp. 76-77.) The three bills record sixty-six performances in the years 1630, 1636, and 1638 (all Old Style). Of these sixty-six performances only eight took place on Sundays. Indeed, in 1636 only one of the twenty-two plays and in 1638 only one of the twenty-four were performed by the King's men at court on the Sabbath. These figures might almost suggest that the court officials, or perhaps the King's men, were trying to avoid Sunday performances.

I suspect that for the first five years of the reign of Charles I the court did follow a policy of avoiding Sunday performances. In these years I have been able to find only three records of Sunday dramatic entertainment at court in London—a masque given by Buckingham at York House, 5 November 1626; an unknown Queen's masque, 14 January 1626/7; and a 'running masque' on 6 January 1627/8. This number is abnormally small, and only one of the three was given at royal expense and in the usual hall. Must one assume a disproportionate number of lacunas in Sunday records? Or was the young King Charles, or the Lord Chamberlain, impressed by the Parliamentary action of 1625? The statute is specific about plays and interludes.

An Act for punishing divers Abuses committed on the Lord's Day, called Sunday. Forasmuch as . . . the holy keeping of the Lord's Day is a principal Part of the true Service of God, which in very many Places of this Realm hath been and now is profaned and neglected by a disorderly Sort of People, in exercising and frequenting Bear-baiting, Bull-baiting, Interludes, Common Plays and other unlawful Exercises and Pastimes upon the Lord's Day; and for that many Quarrels, Bloodsheds and other great inconveniences have grown up by the Resort and Concourse of People going out of their own Parishes to such disordered and unlawful Exercises and Pastimes, neglecting Divine Service both in their own Parishes and elsewhere; (2) Be it enacted . . . That from and after forty Days next after the End of this Session of Parliament, there shall be no Meetings, Assemblies, or Concourse of People out of their own Parishes on the Lord's Day . . . for any Sports and Pastimes whatsoever; (3) nor any Bear-baiting, Bull-baiting, Interludes, Common Plays or other unlawful Exercises and Pastimes, used by any Person or Persons within their own Parishes; (4) and that every Person or Persons offending in any of the Premises shall forfeit for every Offence three Shillings four-pence . . . and in Default of such Distress that the party offending be set publickly in the Stocks by the Space of three Hours. . . . (The Statutes at Large . . ., iii [1763], 121-2.)

William Prynne in his compendious attack on all aspects of the theatre says that Sunday dancing was an offence particularly in the mind of the Commons at the time the law was passed.

Dancing therefore on the Lords-day . . . is . . . an unlawfull pastime punishable by the Statute of I Caroli. cap. 1. which intended to suppress dancing on the Lords-day, as well as Beare-bayting, Bull-bayting, Enterludes, and Common Playes; which were not so rife, so common as dancing, when this law was first inacted. (Histriomastix [1633], II.)

Since so few of the three court performances as noted above—and only one a standard court masque—are recorded between the date of the statute and 1630, I suspect some sort of deference to the Sabbatarianism of Parliament in the early years of Charles's reign.

The early practice of King Charles does not seem to have been the same as that of the late years of his father's reign. Such incomplete records as we have show a contrast in these two periods. Edmond Malone's extracts from the Office Book of Sir Henry Herbert were admittedly incomplete, but I can think of no reason why he should have copied a higher proportion of Sunday records than of week-day ones. For the last three seasons of the reign of King James, Malone copied the records of 25 performances of plays and masques at court, eight of them on Sundays: 1622-3, seven performances, three on Sundays; 1623-4, ten performances, three on Sundays; and 1624-5, eight performances, two on Sundays. (Herbert, pp. 49-52.) This contrast with a single extant record of a regular royal performance on Sunday in the first five seasons of the reign of King Charles seems to me a clear indication of some wariness at court of current Sabbatarianism, at least so far as conspicuous entertainments like masques and plays were concerned.

If such wariness ever existed, it wore off in the course of 1630-31, when the court had a new theatre for a plaything. (See above, vi. 270-1.) In this year we have records of fifteen court performances, seven of them on Sundays.

In summary, then, we can say that Sunday performances of masques and plays at court were fairly common, except for the period 1625 to 1630, when the Sabbath seems to have been kept at court. This restriction came to an end with the opening of the remodelled Cockpit-at-Court in 1630, and thereafter no avoidance of Sunday performances can be detected.

APPENDIX C

ANNALS OF JACOBEOAN AND CAROLINE THEATRICAL AFFAIRS

THESE annals have been assembled in the hope that a day-by-day ordering of events might be helpful to scholars seeking the theatrical context of a play or an event. Whenever possible references have been made to earlier volumes in this work, and citation has been reduced to simple volume and page. Publication dates for plays and Stationers' Register entries have not been documented, since they all come from the Bibliography of the English Printed Drama to the Restoration of Sir Walter Greg, who originally suggested to me the usefulness of a compilation of annals.

Other works have been cited when they contain material not used in the preceding volumes or when they give fuller transcriptions than I have needed. A certain number of non-dramatic events have been listed when they may be expected to have affected plays and their production—royal movements, birthdays, weddings, deaths, processions, and other occasions of wide public interest.

1615/16

JANUARY

- 1 (M) An unnamed masque was performed in the Banqueting House at Whitehall (Diary of Lady Anne Clifford, p. 17; M.S.C. vi. 61).
- 5 (F) The anonymous The Wisdom of Doctor Dodipoll transferred S.R.
- 6 (Sa) Lady Anne Clifford saw the masque of 1 January repeated at court. (Diary of Lady Anne Clifford, p. 17.)

FEBRUARY

- 1 (Th) Ben Jonson was granted a pension of one hundred marks a year for life by the King. (iv. 609.)
- 2 (F) An unknown show was performed at Trinity College, Cambridge. (G. C. Moore Smith, College Plays, p. 67, from Senior Bursars' Accounts.)
- 13 Shrove Tuesday.
- 14 (W) Lady Anne Clifford wrote that 'my Lord supped at the Globe' (Diary of Lady Anne Clifford, p. 18), but the reference may be to a tavern.

- 28 (W) William Peadle the father and William Peadle the son presented feats of activity upon ropes before the Queen at Greenwich. (M.S.C. vi. 144.)

FEBRUARY-MARCH

James Maxwell and nine assistants were paid for four days of work in preparing the Cockpit at Whitehall twice for plays; Zachary Bethell and five assistants were paid for making ready three times for three different plays; and Richard Lecavell was paid for attending in the Banqueting House for two masques, presumably about this time. (M.S.C. vi. 113.)

MARCH

- 4 (M) William Peadle the father William Peadle the son presented feats of activity upon ropes before the Queen at Greenwich. (M.S.C. vi. 144.)
- 12 (Tu) John Chappell's Susenbrotus or Fortunia was performed before the King at Royston. (iii. 159-60.)
- 19 (Tu) Beaumont and Fletcher's The Scornful Lady entered S.R.
- 20 (W) Ten members of Prince Charles's (I) company agreed to pay Edward Alleyn and Jacob Meade one-fourth of the receipts from the galleries of the Hope toward their indebtedness of £400 for loans and costumes. (i. 199.)

1616

- 25 (M) The customary tilting for Coronation Day (i.e. Accession Day) was apparently held on the day following, since the 24th was a Sunday. (M.S.C. vi. 61, 113.)
- 31 Easter Sunday.

APRIL

- 1 (M) The King's company performed fourteen unnamed and undated plays at court between 1 November 1615 (W) and 1 April 1616, presumably the last one on this day. (i. 94.)
- 2 (Tu) William Pedel danced on the ropes and showed other feats of activity at court. (M.S.C. vi. 61.)
- 9 (Tu) The anonymous The Fair Maid of the Exchange transferred S.R.

- 29 (M) The Prince's company was paid for four unnamed and undated plays performed at court before the Prince, apparently beginning some time in 1615. (M.S.C. vi. 61.)

MAY

- 20 (M) The Queen's company was paid for four unnamed and undated plays performed at court before the King, apparently beginning some time in 1615. (M.S.C. vi. 62.)

MAY-JULY

John Heborne and nine assistants were paid for two days work in making ready for bear-baiting at Greenwich in this period. (M.S.C. vi. 112.)

JULY

- 16 (Tu) The Lord Chamberlain wrote to provincial officials that certain London players were touring illegally with warrants or duplicate warrants of the Queen's, Children of the Revels, Prince's, and Palsgrave's players. The players were ordered to be apprehended, since they were not London companies, but mostly vagabonds. (i. 178-9.)

AUGUST

- 9 (F) Christopher Beeston leased from John Best the buildings from which the Phoenix theatre was remodelled. (i. 160.)
 21 (W) The Lord Mayor wrote the Privy Council again concerning the continuing construction of the Puddle Wharf theatre. (vi. 84.)
 31 (Sa) Sir William Alexander's additions to Sidney's Arcadia, which already contained Sidney's The Entertainment at Wanstead (The Lady of May), entered S.R.

SEPTEMBER

- 10 (Tu) Christopher Beeston was ordered to stop new building in Drury Lane. (ii. 365-6.)
 29 (Su) Christopher Beeston's lease of the Phoenix buildings became effective. (ii. 365.)

OCTOBER

- 1 (Tu) < > 30 September 1617 (Th) The Banqueting House at Whitehall was made ready for barriers at the investiture of Prince Charles (4 November) and for a masque performed there in November, December, and January 1616/17.

- Somerset House was set up for plays in the Presence Chamber and for a masque in the Hall. Greenwich was made ready for a play in the Queen's Great Chamber and for a masque in the Hall. At Woodstock a room was prepared with quarters and rafters for a masque. (Declared Accounts of the Office of Works, P.R.O. E 351/3251.)
- 4 (F) Process was begun against Christopher Beeston and the rest of the players of the Red Bull for arrears in highway repair. (ii. 366.)
- 15 (Tu) The Benchers of Lincoln's Inn agreed to protest to the Queen's Council against the building of the Phoenix theatre. (i. 160.)
- 21 (M) The Prince's company presented fourteen plays before the Prince at court between 21 October 1616 and 13 January 1616/17 (M), presumably the first and last on these two days, but the entire entry has been crossed out. (M.S.C. vi. 67, and also pp. 113, 147.) Payments to Peter Young for work done between November 1616 and February 1616/17 in making ready St. James's for nine plays performed before the Prince are also crossed through. (M.S.C. vi. 113.) A receipt dated November 1617, in which Young requested payment for himself and eight assistants for four days' work at St. James's in making ready for two plays before the Prince, should be considered together with the foregoing 'ghost' payments. (M.S.C. vi. 147.)
- 29 (Tu) The Lord Mayor's show for Sir John Leman, fishmonger: Munday's Chrysanaleia, or The Golden Fishing, was performed. (Chambers, E.S. iii. 449, and M.S.C. iii. 89-91.) It was entered S.R. the same day.
- 31 (Th) At the arrival of Prince Charles for his creation as Prince of Wales, Middleton's pageant, Civitalis Amor, was presented by the City. (Nichols, Progresses of James I, iii. 207-14.)

OCTOBER-NOVEMBER

James Maxwell and nine assistants were paid for two days work in making ready for a play at Whitehall. (M.S.C. vi. 115.)

OCTOBER OR NOVEMBER

Jonson's The Devil Is an Ass was performed at Blackfriars. (iv. 616.)

NOVEMBER

- 1 (F) (<) 2 February 1616/17 (Su) The King's company performed thirteen unnamed and undated plays at Court (i. 94) before the King, Queen, and Prince. (M.S.C. vi. 68.) Presumably the first and last were on these two days.
- 4 (M) Charles was invested Prince of Wales at Whitehall. (Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4L₂; Chamberlain, ii. 31-32.) There were supposed to be tilting, barriers, and a masque by the Inns of Court (Chamberlain, ii. 25). At night an honourable combat by ten gentlemen from each of the four Inns of Court took place. (Nichols, Progresses of James I, iii. 207-14.)
- 9 (Sa) The Lord Mayor, Sir John Leman, entertained the Knights of the Bath with a play and supper at Drapers' Hall; the Knights behaved badly and, after a scandal, left before the banquet. (Chamberlain, ii. 35.)

NOVEMBER

John Tunstall and eight assistants were paid for work done in this month in making ready the Queen's court for a play before the Queen. (M.S.C. vi. 114.)

NOVEMBER-DECEMBER

- 29 (Th) The Lord Mayor's show for Sir Sebastian Harvey, ironmonger: Munday's Siderothriambos, or Steel and Iron Triumphant, was performed. (iv. 925; M.S.C. iii. 93-98.) Sir Walter Raleigh was beheaded on the same day. Aubrey notes that the time of execution was planned to coincide with Lord Mayor's Day, so that the pageants and shows would draw people away from witnessing Raleigh's tragedy. (Nichols, Progresses of James I, iii. 493.)
- 31 (Sa) Edward Alleyn leased the Fortune theatre to ten members of the Palsgrave's company for thirty-one years at £200 per year. (i. 138.)

NOVEMBER

- 1 (Su) The King's company performed eight unnamed and undated plays before the King at court at Allhallowtide and Christmas, presumably the first play about this time. (i. 94; M.S.C. vi. 70.) James Maxwell and eight assistants were paid for an unstated amount of work in September-November, making ready the Cockpit at Whitehall three different times for plays. (M.S.C. vi. 116.) In the same period Sir Richard Conningsby and seven assistants were paid for eight days of work in making ready the Hall at Whitehall four different times for plays; and for eight days of work in preparing the Banqueting House and the Lord Chancellor's Chamber for a masque. (M.S.C. vi. 117.) The Prince's company appear to have performed a play before the King. (M.S.C. vi. 71.)
- 16 (M) Sir George Buc licensed Fletcher's The Loyal Subject for performance. (iii. 370.)
- 30 (M) < > 5 December (Sa) Sir John Digby, who had been created Baron Digby of Sherborne, county Dorset, on

25 November (W), gave a great supper and a play at Whitehall. (Chamberlain, ii. 193.)

DECEMBER

- 11 (F) The Countess of Salisbury provided a great feast and a play. (Chamberlain, ii. 195.)
 21 (M) King James went to London from Newmarket, where Chamberlain had thought the court would probably stay over Christmas because of the smallpox in London. (Chamberlain, ii. 193, 196.)
 23 (W) An actor killed Lord Doncaster's barber. (Chamberlain, ii. 198.)

CHRISTMAS SEASON

- The King's company presented eight unnamed and undated plays before the King at court at Allhallowtide and Christmas. (See 1 November.) Stoicus Vapulans performed at St. John's College, Cambridge. (v. 1413-14.)
 28 (M) < > 2 January 1618/19 (Sa) Lady Hatton made a great supper with a play. (Chamberlain, ii. 199-200.)

JANUARY–FEBRUARY

John Heborne and seven assistants were paid for twenty-four days of work in January–February in making ready the Great Chamber on the Queen's side at Whitehall for the King for nine different plays and three rehearsals of plays to be performed between the Christmas holidays and Easter. (M.S.C. vi. 118.)

JANUARY

- 2 (Su) Robert Lee and his company, formerly Queen Anne's men, presented an unnamed play at court before the King; the play was presumably The Two Merry Milkmaids, by I. C. (iii. 101–4, and M.S.C. vi. 72–73.)
- 3 (M) The 'Running Masque' was performed at the French Ambassador's house by Lennox, Buckingham, Hamilton, and other courtiers. (Chamberlain, ii. 279, 282; C.S.P., Ven., 1619–21, p. 128.)
- 4 (Tu) The 'Running Masque' of 3 January was performed at Lady Hatton's house before the King and Prince. (Chamberlain, ii. 282.)
- 5 (W) The 'Running Masque' of 3 and 4 January was performed at the Earl of Exeter's house. (Chamberlain, ii. 282.)
- 6 (Th) Jonson's News from the New World Discovered in the Moon was performed before the King in the Banqueting House by the Prince, Buckingham, and others. (iv. 663–4; C.S.P., Ven., 1619–21, pp. 128, 135, 138; Chamberlain, ii. 282.)
- 7 (F) The 'Running Masque' of 3, 4, and 5 January was apparently performed at the Earl of Warwick's house. (Chamberlain, ii. 282.)
- 8 (Sa) The 'Running Masque' of 3, 4, 5, and 7 January was to be performed at Viscount Doncaster's house. (Chamberlain, ii. 282.) Sir Francis Nethersole wrote that the King was to be present (C.S.P., Dom., 1619–23, p. 112), and Girolamo Lando noted that both the King and Prince were present (C.S.P., Ven., 1619–21, p. 155.)
- 10 (M) The 'Running Masque' of 3, 4, 5, 7, and 8 January was to be performed at Denmark House. (Chamberlain, ii. 282.) Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster entered S.R.

- 11 (Tu) Jacob Tyn and George Hawkenborough were paid in a warrant of this date for sport [bear-baiting?] presented by them before the King. (M.S.C. vi. 72.)
- 15 (Sa) Dekker and Day's The Life and Death of Guy of Warwick entered S.R.
- 20 (Th) An unusual number of masques had been performed this season by this date; Girolamo Lando noted that the Prince had been slightly indisposed recently, being tired from dancing in the masques. (C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 151.) During this month on an unspecified date Ben Jonson and the King's company were commanded to attend the King at court. (i. 7-8.) Peter Heylyn's Doublet, Breeches, and Shirt was performed in January at Magdalen College, Oxford. (iv. 551.)

FEBRUARY

- 12 (Sa) The 'Running Masque' was ranging over all the country in the vicinity of Newmarket, including Sir John Crofts's house at Saxham Parva, near Bury St. Edmunds. (Chamberlain, ii. 288.) John Chamberlain noted that not later than 12 February an anti-feminist campaign, originating in the pulpits, had been carried forward on the stage and in ballads. (Chamberlain, ii. 289.)
- 17 (Th) A masque was planned for the court by the daughters of Sir John Crofts at his house at Saxham Parva, Suffolk, near Bury St. Edmunds. (Chamberlain, ii. 288.) Thomas Sackville and seven assistants were paid for an unstated amount of work in January-February, making ready Sir John Crofts's house at Saxham for a masque for the King. (M.S.C. vi. 117.)
- 29 Shrove Tuesday. Jonson's masque, News from the New World Discovered in the Moon, was performed again. (iv. 663-5.) During February a messenger was sent from the court at Whitehall to the Prince's company in Shoreditch to command them to attend the Prince. (M.S.C. vi. 148.)

MARCH

- 8 (W) The Prince's company was paid for four unnamed and undated plays performed before the King at court, perhaps some of them in 1619. (M.S.C. vi. 72.) Munday's The Downfall and Death of Robert Earl of Huntingdon transferred S.R.
- 23 (Th) The King's company was paid for ten unnamed and undated plays performed before the King, perhaps some of them in 1619. (i. 94; M.S.C. vi. 73.)

- 24 (F) The tilting for the King's Day was especially elaborate, since it was the first tilt of Prince Charles. (Chamberlain, ii. 294, 298; Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4L₈; C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 225; and M.S.C. vi. 118.) In February-March, John Gosnold and seven assistants were paid for four days of work in making ready the tiltyard and the Prince's pavilion; for two days of work in preparing Sir Thomas Walsingham's house at Whitehall for the King of Bohemia's Ambassador and other Ambassadors for the tilting day; and for three days of work in preparing the Cockpit at Whitehall three different times for the King, perhaps for plays, or possibly for cock-fights. (M.S.C. vi. 117.)

- 26 (Su) The King made his first procession to St. Paul's to hear the preaching, accompanied by the Bishops and Peers of the Realm, Lord Mayor and Aldermen. (Chamberlain, ii. 299.)

APRIL

- 14 (F) The King feasted Count Swartsenbuk, Ambassador from the Emperor, and his train in the Upper parliament House. (Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4L₈.)
 16 Easter Sunday.
 18 (Tu) The tilting of 24 March was repeated. (Chamberlain, ii. 298; and M.S.C. vi. 117.)
 30 (Su) The King's company performed an unnamed play at court (i. 94) before the King. (M.S.C. vi. 73.)

- 20 (Sa) Jonson's Entertainment at Blackfriars was performed. (iv. 639-40.)
 22 (M) I. C.'s The Two Merry Milkmaids entered S.R.

JUNE

- 6 (Tu) A bear-baiting was presented before the King. (M.S.C. vi. 74.) Thomas Sackville and eight assistants were paid for two days of work in April-June, making ready for the bull-baiting and bear-baiting. (M.S.C. vi. 118.)
 19 (M) Jonson and Jones's masque, Pan's Anniversary, or The Shepherd's Holiday, was performed at court by the Prince, Buckingham, and others. (iv. 665-9.)

JULY

- 4 (Tu) Middleton and Rowley's masque, The World Tossed at Tennis, entered S.R.
- 30 (Su) John Cotton, John Williams, and Thomas Dixon licensed to build a large amphitheatre in London. (vi. 292-3.) Thomas Sackville and seven assistants were paid for 28 days of work in July-August, making ready at Bromham and Beaulieu for the King for five sermons and bull-baiting. (M.S.C. vi. 118.)

AUGUST

- 5 (Sa) At Salisbury the King was given a show or play of twelve parts in which prominent noblemen performed. (C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 390.) Sir Richard Calverley and seven assistants were paid for four days of work in July-August, making ready twice at Salisbury for a masque [sic]. (M.S.C. vi. 118.)
- 28 (M) < > 16 September (Sa) On 28 August Sir Edward Zouch wrote his brother that he expected to give the King and Prince masques each night at Woking. (C.S.P., Dom., 1619-23, p. 175.) Chamberlain's letter of 16 September indicates that the masques must have taken place. (Chamberlain, ii. 318.)

SEPTEMBER

- 6 (W) Middleton was appointed City Chronologer. (iv. 857-8.)
- 29 (F) The King wrote to the Privy Council to revoke a licence previously granted to John Cotton, John Williams, and Thomas Dixon, to build an amphitheatre. (vi. 296-7.) John Gosnold and eight assistants were paid for two days of work in September-October, making ready for a play on Michaelmas Night. (M.S.C. vi. 119.)

OCTOBER

- 6 (F) Sir George Buc censored Dekker and Massinger's The Virgin Martyr for the Red Bull. (iii. 263-6.)
- 30 (M) The Lord Mayor's Show for Sir Francis Jones, haberdasher: John Squire's Tes Irenes Trophæa, or The Triumphs of Peace, was performed on this day, apparently because the 29th fell on a Sunday. (v. 1185; M.S.C. iii. 100.)

NOVEMBER

- 29 (W) The suit of Witter against Heminges and Condell for shares in the Globe (see 20 April 1620) was finally dismissed. (ii. 411.)

DECEMBER

- 13 (W) Dekker and Day's The Life and Death of Guy of Warwick transferred S.R.

Thomas May's The Heir was acted by the Revels company some time this year. (iv. 836.) The King's company performed nine unnamed and undated plays at court before 17 March 1620/1, and the Prince's men two before 20 March, presumably some of them in 1620 (i. 94; M.S.C. vi. 74). In October–December John Heborne (deceased) and eight assistants performed work for which they received payment: for twelve days of work in making ready the Great Chamber on the Queen's side, and the Great Chamber and Hall on the King's side for six different plays; for two days of work in preparing the Great Chamber on the Queen's side for the Prince for his dancing; for four days of work in preparing the Privy Chamber on the Queen's side twice for the Prince for his practising; and for ten days of work in preparing the Hall twice for the Prince for his masques. (M.S.C. vi. 118–19.) John Gosnold and seven assistants were paid for two days of work done in December–March 1621, making ready the Great Chamber for dancing. (M.S.C. vi. 119.)

Plays published in 1620

Anonymous, Sweetnam the Woman-Hater Arraigned by Women;
 Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher, Philaster (Q1);
 I. C., The Two Merry Milkmaids;
 Ben Jonson, Epicoene (presumably the 3rd edn.—two issues);
 Christopher Marlowe, Doctor Faustus (6th edn.);
 Thomas Middleton and William Rowley, The World Tossed at Tennis;
 John Squire, Tes Irenes Trophæa, or The Triumphs of Peace.

JANUARY

- 6 (Sa) An unknown masque was performed at Whitehall in which a Puritan was ridiculed; it was not Jonson's News from the New World Discovered in the Moon, as has often been stated. (iv. 663–5; Chamberlain, ii. 333; Finetti Philoxenis, p. 71.)
 On 22 December 1620 (F) Chamberlain had written of preparations for the masque (Chamberlain, ii. 332).
- 8 (M) In the afternoon the Prince ran at tilt before the French

- Ambassadors, along with six or seven noblemen. (Chamberlain, ii. 333.) In the evening Viscount Doncaster entertained the French Ambassadors and the King and Prince with an elaborate banquet and a masque presented by nine young gentlemen. (Chamberlain, ii. 333-4; Finetti Philoxenis, p. 72.)
- 20 (Sa) < > 12 February (M) Since the Thames was frozen over, ice fairs were held. (Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4L₆^v.)
- 30 (Tu) The King and Prince rode in great state to the Parliament House, accompanied by the Bishops and Nobility. (Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4L₆^v; Chamberlain, ii. 338; C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 562.)

FEBRUARY

- Messages were sent from the Prince at St. James's to his players at the Curtain ordering them to attend the Prince. (vi. 134-5.)
- 10 (Sa) The Attorney-General was ordered to prepare a new licence for the proposed amphitheatre. (vi. 298.)
- 11 Shrove Sunday. The unknown masque of the previous Twelfth Night was repeated at court. (Finetti Philoxenis, p. 73.) It was presented by the Prince to the King and the Spanish and Flemish Ambassadors. (C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 579.)
- 13 Shrove Tuesday. An unnamed masque of the gentlemen of the Middle Temple was performed in the Great Hall at Whitehall for the six commissioners from the Netherlands. (Finetti Philoxenis, pp. 73-74; C.S.P., Ven., 1619-21, p. 579.) John Gosnold and seven assistants were paid for four days of work done in December-March, preparing for the masque from the Temple to be performed on Shrove Sunday, apparently an error for Shrove Tuesday. (M.S.C. vi. 119.)

MARCH

- 20 (Tu) The Prince's company presented two unnamed and undated plays before the King at court, perhaps one or both of them in 1620. (M.S.C. vi. 74.)

JANUARY

- 1 (W) The King's company performed Jonson's The Alchemist at court. (i. 94.)
 6 (M) The anonymous A Vow and a Good One was performed at court by Prince Charles's (I) company. (v. 1432-3.)
 11 (Sa) S. S.'s The Honest Lawyer transferred S.R.
 19 (Su) Jonson and Jones's masque, Time Vindicated to Himself and to His Honours, was performed at court by the Prince and others. (iv. 672-6; M.S.C. vi. 121.) Chamberlain indicates that the masque was intended for Twelfth Night, but was delayed until this date. (Chamberlain, ii. 472-3.)
 20 (M) Massinger's The Duke of Milan entered S.R.
 21 (Tu) The Lady Elizabeth's men were paid for presenting two unnamed and undated plays before the King at court. (M.S.C. vi. 77.)

FEBRUARY

- 2 (Su) The King's company performed Shakespeare's Twelfth Night at court. (i. 94.) John Gosnold and seven assistants were paid for two days of work done in January-March, making ready the Banqueting House for a play at Candlemas (M.S.C. vi. 121), which could of course refer to the season rather than the day itself.
 17 (M) Jonson's Epicoene and Chapman's The Revenge of Bussy D'Ambois transferred S.R.

- 25 Shrove Tuesday. No plays or other entertainments were performed at court during Shrovetide. (Herbert, p. 50.)
- 28 (F) John Hacket's Loyola was performed at Trinity College, Cambridge. (iv. 528-9.)

MARCH

- 12 (W) John Hacket's Loyola was performed before the King at Trinity College, Cambridge. (iv. 528-9.)
- 14 (F) The King's company was paid for performing four unnamed and undated plays at court, in addition to the five on 26 December, 27 December, 29 December, 1 January, and 2 February. (i. 94.) A warrant of 14 March for all nine plays indicates that the King was present. (M.S.C. vi. 77.)
- 21 (F) Herbert was paid 10s. for allowing the Red Bull to be used for a fencing exhibition during Lent. (Herbert, p. 48.)
- 24 (M) There was apparently no tilting in honour of King's Day. The Prince was in Spain, and the King was apparently not in town. Chamberlain records only the sermon at Paul's Cross. (Chamberlain, ii. 487.)

The new Fortune theatre opened in the spring. (vi. 157.) Probably in April or May royal livery was granted to twelve members of the King's company (i. 90).

The King's company performed twelve unnamed and undated plays at court before the King, according to a warrant of 22 March 1629/30 naming Ellyardt Swanston as payee. (i. 96; M.S.C. vi. 81.) Another warrant, dated 3 April 1630, names John Heminges as payee. (M.S.C. ii. 352.) Presumably one of the twelve was at Somerset House, where the Surveyor was ordered to erect a stage and scene, according to a warrant of 8 December. (M.S.C. ii. 351.)
- An unknown masque of uncertain date was supposed to be performed at court in 1629-30. (Reyher, Les Masques Anglais, p. 529.)

Plays published in 1629

Anonymous, Wine, Beer, and Ale (Q1);
 Lodowick Carlell, The Deserving Favourite (1st edn.);
 William Davenant, Albovine, King of the Lombards;
 Thomas Dekker, London's Tempe, or The Field of Happiness (?);
 John Fletcher, The Faithful Shepherdess (Q2);

John Ford, The Lover's Melancholy;
 Philip Massinger, The Roman Actor;
 William Shakespeare, Richard III (Q7—8th edn.);
 James Shirley, The Wedding (Q1);
 Philip Sidney, Arcadia, containing The Entertainment at Wan- stead (The Lady of May) (reissue of 1627–1628 edn.);
 George Wilkins, The Miseries of Enforced Marriage (Q3).

Michaelmas Term, Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor, and Middleton's The Phoenix transferred S.R.

FEBRUARY

- 9 Shrove Tuesday.
 26 (F) James Shirley's The Grateful Servant and Chettle's
Hoffman entered S.R.
 27 (Sa) James Mabbe's translation of de Rojas's The Spanish
Bawd entered S.R.
 } 28 (Su) The Queen's company performed ten plays at court before the King and Queen between October 1629 and February 1629/30; Anthony Turner was named payee on a warrant of 4 July 1630. (M.S.C. vi. 81.) Another warrant, dated 5 July, gives neither the payee nor the fact that the King and Queen were present. (M.S.C. ii. 352.)

MARCH

- 22 (M) Massinger's The Renegado, or The Gentleman of Venice
 entered S.R.

1630

- 26 (F) Randolph's Aristippus, or The Jovial Philosopher and The Conceited Pedlar entered S.R.
 28 Easter Sunday.

APRIL

- 8 (Th) Middleton's A Chaste Maid in Cheapside entered S.R., and Davenport's The Pedlar (lost?) transferred S.R.

- 16 (F) The anonymous Pathomachia, or The Battle of the Affections, or Love's Loadstone entered S.R.
- 17 (Sa) Herbert closed the theatres because of the plague. (ii. 657-8.)

MAY

- 30 (Th) Wilson's The Inconstant Lady, or Better Late than Never was performed by the King's company at Hampton Court. (v. 1271-2.) This was apparently the first of twenty-one plays acted by the King's company at court before the King and Queen in the period 30 September < > 21 February 1630/1 (M); it must be one of the four plays acted at Hampton Court during this period. (M.S.C. vi. 82 and ii. 354-5.)

OCTOBER

- 1 (F) < > 30 September 1631 (F) The Declared Accounts of the Office of Works for this period provide payment for sundry extraordinary works about the Cockpit and playhouse at Whitehall, as well as for work done in the summer of 1630 at the Cockpit and Whitehall. (P.R.O. E 351/3264.) (See vi. 272-3.)
- 3 (Su) The anonymous Alphonsus, Emperor of Germany was performed at court by the King's company. (v. 1286.)

- 9 (Sa) John Heminges, player, made his will, with theatrical legacies. (ii. 643-5.) A proclamation of 15 September (W) had provided for adjournment of the term in the period 9 October (Sa) < > 27 October (W), because of the plague. (Stow, Annales [1631], sig. 4M₆^v.)
- 10 (Su) < > 20 February 1630/1 (Su) Sixteen plays were presented at court by Queen Henrietta's company, presumably on the days mentioned and fourteen others; three were at Hampton Court. (i. 249.) One warrant is dated 25 May 1631 (M.S.C. ii. 355), while another is dated 28 November 1631, and adds the information that the plays were presented before the King and Queen. (M.S.C. vi. 82.)
- 17 (Su) The King's company performed A Midsummer Night's Dream at Hampton Court. (i. 27.)
- 24 (Su) The King's company performed Fletcher's The Custom of the Country at Hampton Court. (iii. 324.)
- 29 (F) The Lord Mayor's Show for Sir Robert Ducey, merchant tailor, was supposed to be performed; Dekker had proposed a pageant to the company, but none was given. (M.S.C. iii. 120.)

NOVEMBER

- 5 (F) The anonymous An Induction for the House and Fletcher's The Mad Lover were performed by the King's men at the new Cockpit-in-Court, probably for the opening of that theatre. (v. 1353-4; iii. 374.)
- 7 (Su) Fletcher's Rollo, or The Bloody Brother was performed by the King's men at court. (iii. 401-2.)
- 8 (M) The anonymous Sir John Oldcastle, Part I; Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus, Henry VI, Part II, Henry V, and Pericles; and the anonymous A Yorkshire Tragedy transferred S.R. Dekker's Match Me in London entered S.R.
- 12 (F) The theatres reopened. (ii. 657-8.) Sometime later, 18 February 1630/31 (F) < > 10 June 1631 (F), the theatres were closed, owing to a renewal of the plague. (ii. 658-9.)
- 16 (Tu) The following Shakespeare plays transferred S.R.: The Tempest, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Measure for Measure, A Comedy of Errors, As You Like It, All's Well That Ends Well, Twelfth Night, The Winter's Tale, Henry VI, Part III, Henry VIII, Coriolanus, Timon of Athens, Julius Caesar, Macbeth, Antony and Cleopatra, and Cymbeline.

- 20 (Sa) An order was issued to William Allen for liveries for fourteen Queen Henrietta's men. (i. 226.)
- 25 (Th) Herbert licensed Randolph's The Muses' Looking Glass, or The Entertainment; the play seems to have been acted in the summer of 1630. (v. 986.)
- 26 (F) Herbert licensed Randolph's Amyntas, or The Impossible Dowry for the Children of the Revels. (v. 969.)
- 28 (Su) Ford's Beauty in a Trance was performed at Whitehall by the King's men. (iii. 438.)
- 30 (Tu) Fletcher's Beggars' Bush was performed at court by the King's men. (iii. 313.)
 Randolph's Praeludium was performed at the reopening of the Salisbury Court theatre after the plague, probably in November 1630. (v. 989-90.)

DECEMBER

- 6 (M) Jonson's Poetaster, Marston's Antonio and Mellida, and the anonymous Edward IV, Parts I and II, transferred S.R. Sidney's Arcadia, containing The Entertainment at Wanstead (The Lady of May) and Alexander's additions, transferred S.R.
- 9 (Th) The King's company performed Beaumont and Fletcher's The Maid's Tragedy at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 13 (M) The King and Queen of Bohemia's players, restrained by the justices, were granted leave to play. (i. 260.)
- 14 (Tu) The King's company performed Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 26 (Su) The King's company performed Webster's The Duchess of Malfi at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 27 (M) The King's company performed Beaumont and Fletcher's The Scornful Lady at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 30 (Th) The King's company performed Fletcher's The Chances at the Cockpit-in-Court. (iii. 319.)

Plays published in 1630

Anonymous, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife from a Bad (Q6);

1630/31

JANUARY

- 6 (Th) The King's company presented Sir John Oldcastle, Part I, at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
 9 (Su) Jonson and Jones's masque, Love's Triumph through Callipolis, was performed by the King and others for the court. (iv. 652.) The preparations for the masques at Whitehall, as well as other items concerning building the Cockpit in the Declared Accounts of the Office of Works for the period 1 October 1630 (F) < > 30 September 1631 (F), apparently include the masques of 9 January and 22 February (Tu). (P.R.O. E 351/3264.)
 11 (Tu) Herbert refused to license Massinger's play, later titled Believe as You List. (iv. 762.)

FEBRUARY

- 15 (Tu) The King's company presented The Merry Devil of Edmonton at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 17 (Th) The King's company performed Every Man in his Humour at the Cockpit-in-Court. (i. 28.)
- 18 (F) Herbert granted John Lowin a licence for a Dutch vaulter to perform at their 'house[s?]'. Probably only Globe intended. (vi. 194 n. 4.) On the same day he recorded his receipts at the second day of a revival of Every Man in His Humour at Blackfriars. (i. 24.)
- 20 (Su) One of the sixteen unknown plays acted by Queen Henrietta's players at court in the period 10 October 1630 (Su) < > 20 February 1630/1 was presumably performed on this day. (M.S.C. ii. 355 and vi. 82.)
- 21 (M) The King's men presented Fletcher's Rollo, or The Bloody Brother at the Cockpit-in-Court during the daytime. (i. 28; iii. 402; M.S.C. ii. 354-5.) This was apparently the last of twenty-one plays acted before the King and Queen at court by the King's company in the period 30 September 1630 (Th) < > 21 February 1630/1 (M.S.C. vi. 82); the names and dates of performance of all twenty-one plays are known. (i. 96.)
- 22 Shrove Tuesday. Jonson's masque Chloridia was performed at court by the Queen and her ladies. (iv. 636-8.) The preparations for the masque on 9 January would appear to apply to this performance as well.
- 25 (F) James Shirley's The School of Compliment, or Love Tricks entered S.R.

MARCH

- 11 (F) Herbert licensed Massinger's The Emperor of the East for the King's company. (iv. 778.)
